The Annual Mayor Sharon Robinsin-Briggs City of Plainfield State of Business Address

When a new business expands or relocates to their municipality, jobs are created so it's a no brainer why the City of Plainfield's Economic Development Department works very hard to lure in entrepreneurs and businesses. Business owners and managers put in a lot of thought of where they have the best chance of succeeding. Plainfield, NJ boasts a business friendly environment with non obtrusive business regulations, minimal taxes and tax breaks for hiring a large workforce or making a significant investment in the community. Plainfield is geographically unique, so it's important to understand what differentiates Plainfield from other places.

The City of Plainfield's tax payer funded economic development team is amongst the best in the business. Municipal budgets across the country are understandably tight, but Plainfield's economic development team still managed to attract new development to the tune of over 25 million dollars in new development, including Brownfield grants, Green opportunities, and much more that will be discussed at the address.

The Mayor's State of Business Address will reveal and reiterate the opportunities for new businesses as well as existing businesses.
